

The Two Paths

F. J. Crosby

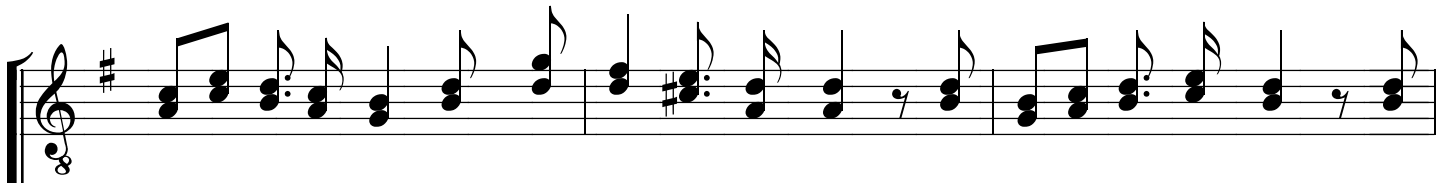

Geo. C. Stebbins

1.) Two paths lie be - fore you, which one will you take? For 2.) Two paths lie be - fore you, the nar - row and wide; The 3.) The first has its tri - als, but you shall be strong, With 4.) Two paths lie be - fore you, and what will you say? A now is the time when a choice you should make: The first leads to Je - sus, the first has its way - marks, the oth - er no guide; Think well e'er the fi - nal de - Je - sus your Sav - iour to help you a - long; The first has its cross-es that ques - tion so ur - gent ad - mits no de - lay; If you would be hap - py this soul's dear - est Friend, the oth - er in dark - ness and ru - in will end.

cis - ion you make, Two paths lie be - fore you, which one will you take?
all must en - dure, And yet to the faith - ful the crown will be sure.
course you must take, The good you must fol - low, the e - vil for - sake.

Which one will you take? which one will you take? Two paths lie be-fore you, which one will you take? Which one will you take? which one will you take? Two paths lie be-fore you; which one will you take?

